

Interview Performance Taking Control

- Could you walk into an interview feeling confident in who you are, what you represent and your value?
- What if you were able to talk about yourself with clarity and confidence, articulating a clear and concise message?
- What if your deep understanding of human behaviour and decision making made all the difference?

So many people do all the hard work to get to the interview, only to crash and burn. The optimism that might be felt from being selected for an interview is soon replaced with a feeling of dread, as we realise that the interview is not going as planned. Maybe, we haven't prepared well, or stumble over a question. Maybe we sense that we are not getting on with the individual or individuals involved, or we feel like we are not SELLING ourselves very well. Maybe, we end up walking away despondent that we haven't put the story forward in an interesting and compelling way, again.

This Webinar is 90 minutes of jam packed, insightful and challenging information, that will change the way that you prepare and perform in an interview. We will discuss the preparation process, the importance of storytelling and how to craft and deliver key messages. We will teach you how to develop messaging that has impact, control the dialogue, talk about achievements in an interesting way and how to find a connection with the interviewer. All of this important information will be delivered in just 90 minutes.

"I left the interview feeling like that was the best I could have done. Win or lose, I feel great about what I said and the rest will be up to them. I'm quietly confident."
